

My daddy's an alcoholic

You have reached for it again. You don't know how to say when How much do you really care? Will that love ever be there.

From bottle to bottle you hop. When will you ever stop?
If you have problems solve them. Don't run away they'll be there the next day.

You drink once more. It's time to close my door.
You frighten me so why can't you let go? You yell and scream, it's not just a bad dream. You hurt me so badly I've learned to cry so sadly. My feelings I can not share cause no one ever cared.

I'm not those things you say. But you repeat them each day You scare me to tears. I know all my fears. What kind of father are you? You sure aren't true. Why can't you tell us what's wrong? It's too late everything is gone.

You drink and drink and more every time. A little sicker a little sore. Soon you'll die and wonder why. We have the answer and we cry.

I have a need as you watch me bleed. I have to go
You won't even know. When I finally run. Will you end your fun. I promise to come back when you have found the right track.

It's a hard thing to face. When you've run to a strange place. I wish I could go back.
But my daddy still hasn't found the right track.
